HEALTH BOARD IS CENSURED BY THE CITY COUNCILMEN

President is Criticized for Granting a Cesspool Permit.

PAVING PETITIONS PRESENTED

Apple Street and Baldwin Avenue Residents Want Their Streets Improved and Volunteer to Bear Entire Expenses; Brief Meeting is Held.

The board of health, particularly the president of it, was censured by city council at its special meeting last night when the charge was made that permission had been granted to rebuild a cesspool to a property owner along Gibson avenue whose building is within easy access to a sewer. The complaint was laid before council by Miss Anna E. Volstead, who said that up to 1000 feet within a single block, and expressed the conviction that these were due to the unsanitary conditions permitted to exist. It was further complained that the street needs grading, and that the steps leading from Eighth street are in bad shape. All of these matters were referred to Superintendent T. J. Hooper of the sewer department, and the city engineer, who said that the complaint of S. B. Dickey, who said his Eighth street property is constantly being damaged by the dirt and rubbish carried down the Gibson avenue hill by every rain.

Little other business was transacted by the councilmen. Superintendent John L. Oans of the department of accounts and finances was out of town and could not be reached. Work on the paving project will not begin until next Monday, when it is expected that preliminary work will be started on some of the paving projects.

Two paving petitions were presented, one from the residents of East Apple street, between Prospect and Main, and the other from Baldwin avenue, from Pittsburgh street to the East Franklin bridge. Petitioners, however, along Baldwin avenue signed that petition, excepting the Carnegie Free Library trustees, and most of the Apple street owners were favorable to that improvement. The city engineer will make an estimate of the cost of the two contracts and ordinances will be drawn by the city solicitor.

Councilman John Duggan reported on his trip to Harrisburg with Captain Giese, when the Municipal Home Rule League was organized to seek the repeal of obnoxious features in the public service law. Mr. Duggan said that the city and borough would insist that they be given free rein to deal with public service corporations than is permitted under the law.

"There is a noisy sidewalk along the Yough bridge, was again held up. The county commissioners are anxious to start this work, but council is deaf to the idea of seeing the plan for the approach on the east side. A portion of West Main street must be occupied, and the councilmen have no desire to entirely block the street. The matter will likely be settled under a new ordinance.

Superintendent G. W. Wright of the public safety department was authorized to make necessary repairs to the stile in the East Side fire house and to have the telephones in the West Side quarters rearranged. Receptacles will be installed in the firemen's rooms. At present there is no bell phone and the Tri-State instrument which has been in the plant of the Young Crystal Ice & Storage Company for some years will be moved to the fire quarters. The ice plant's fire which has not been used by the department for a long time, but no one thought to have the telephone changed.

Chief of Police Bowers was directed to wear with the regular uniform. He will go to Uniontown, where straw helmets have been adopted, and decide whether that style is desired here. The policemen have ordered new uniforms and want sufficient to supply the headgear, as has been customary.

The salary of Mrs. Carrie Stillwater, janitor in city hall, was increased from $20 to $25 a month, effective July 1, and she will clean the building three times a week instead of once, as heretofore.

CONGRESSMAN DENOUNCES TRADUCERS OF A JURIST

Declares No Court Would Tolerate Methods Followed by the Speer Investigators.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Complete exoneration of Federal Judge Elmer Sper of the southern district of Georgia from charges that led to Congressmen's censure of his conduct was recommended today in a minority report of the investigative subcommittee of the House Republican conference. Representative Volstead also attacked the methods and findings of the majority of the subcommittee who held that the evidence did not warrant impeachment but criticized certain acts of the accused jurist.

"What comes in the recommendations of the majority report can no further proceedings is had upon the charges against Judge Speer. I desire to express in as emphatic language as possible my protest against the methods that have been pursued," said Representative Volstead in his report.

"I desire to have it distinctly understood that I do not criticize the motives of my associates, but the proceedings in this investigation have been marred by what I consider unfair and unjust. No effort was made to protect Judge Speer against mere slander and abuse that could serve no other purpose than to disgrace and humiliate him. Every enemy that 20 years on the bench had produced was invited and encouraged to denounce his grievance and to supplement that with libelous, innominate and insulting opinion uttered in the evidence and incompetent for any other purpose. It is humiliating to read this record and to have to admit that a committee of Congress is responsible for this sort of cruel injustice. No court in any civilized country would tolerate such proceedings."

FOR TRADE COMMISSION

Senator Newlands Says Such a Body Would Have Prevented Monopolies.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—That a Federal trade commission created at the time of the establishment of the Interstate Commerce Commission would have prevented the development of monopolies in the United States is one of the conclusions of the report of Chairman Newlands of the Interstate Commerce committee on the trade commission bill presented today to the Senate.

"With this commission," said the report, "we would not now have to deal with such organizations as the United States Steel Corporation, the International Harvester Company, and the American Refining Company."

The Senate bill is substituted for House bill. The measures are alike in principle.

Half an hour later the barbers posted signs "Hair cuts and shaves Saturday only" the offices in the court-house were locked and every county official put on his old clothes; barbers got their tools and the editor placed his wife in charge of the shop.

WEST PENN'S LINE TO UNIONTOWN WILL SOON BE COMPLETED

Rights of Way Obtained for Extension From Oliver No. 2.

CONTRACT FOR BRIDGE AWARDED

Contractors Go Over Ground to Bid on Construction of Less Than a Mile of Track Remaining to Complete Second Line to County Seat.

The letting of a contract for the construction of a 195-foot span over the Pennsylvania railroad at Uniontown by the West Penn Railways Company to the Penn Bridge Company of Beaver Falls yesterday marks the beginning of steps toward the completion of the second trolley line between Uniontown and Connellsville.

West Penn spent the day going over the three quarters of a mile that remains uncompleted with the contractors preparing to let contracts for the grading and masonry. These will likely be awarded by the end of this week.

It was stated by officials at the local offices that work would be rushed through to completion as rapidly as possible so that the Connellsville-Uniontown loop may be put in operation.

For some time the two lines between the principal Fayette county towns, just as there are two lines between Scottsdale and Greensburg. The new line will be about 12 miles long.

The connecting link in the loop is about a quarter of a mile long and extends from Oliver No. 2 shaft to the Western Penn Uniontown Carhouse in operation from Connellsville to Oliver for some time, connecting the mining towns of Leislering, Juniper, Bittner, Elm Grove and Phillips.

Work on the construction of the link was stopped last fall because certain rights of way could not be secured and also because of the financial difficulties which the West Penn encountered following the failure of the First Sec'd National Bank of Pittsburgh. Since the reorganization of the company new construction work has been kept to a minimum.

People differ as to whether the completion of the new line will benefit Connellsville or Uniontown. Connellsville has been getting much trade from the coke towns along the Phillips line, some of which may go to Uniontown because of the shorter ride, but local merchants believe that their patrons will not desert them and will continue to come here in the past.

A QUEER STORM.

Electrical Display Thrilling in East But West Was Practically None.

The storm that struck this section last evening was not a general one according to reports from the outlying sections. East of town, the electrical display was a thrilling one and the rain continued long after it had stopped here.

To the west, residents reported that the rain was slight and accompanied very little lightning. There was little thunder and no rain.

That the rainfall was greatest up the Yough was evidenced by the rise in the river, which came up from .90 to 1.15 feet during the night.

TUESDAY EVENING, JUNE 23, 1914.

PIN HEAD PROSPERITY.

The efforts of the Democratic press bureau to make Pennsylvania prosperous are truly heroic but not always truthful. For example, a recent statement announced that ovens were being fired up in the Connellsville coke region, when about 3,000 ovens had just been put out. Now comes the good tidings that a woolen mill has started up in the Connellsville factory town and that a butter factory at West Chester is working over time. But these 3,000 coke ovens remain idle, and iron and steel business is running to only about one-half capacity; under Republican administration and Republican policies they were running practically full. The people in the Connellsville region are more interested in the operation of the coke ovens than in the interests of the Stroudsburg woolen mill and a West Chester milk factory.

Moreover, they will not be deceived by any pin-head prosperity-inventors.

A DEMOCRATIC POSE.

The Supreme Court of the United States has upheld the Kentucky statute permitting the farmers to pool their tobacco. All pools look ready to the high court. In the face of this decision the Democrats are pressing a bill in Congress permitting farmers' alliances and labor unions, but forbidding any other combinations in restraint of trade. The Democrats probably expect the court to declare these features of their proposed law unconstitutional; in the meantime, they hope to catch a few votes by posing as the friend of the farmer and of the laborer.

The Greene county grand jury will investigate alleged grafting practices in the commissioners' office. The Democratic administration of Greene county has already been accused of being immoral, and now it is charged with being dishonest. What are those Democratic times bringing us to?

The Connellsville express merger is one which the government cannot take exceptions to.

A Philadelphia Prohibition organ proposes to compromise by running a ticket composed of Pinchot, McCormick and Creasey. It will be noticed that this ignores the Republican candidates. There will be no compromise with Republicans this year. The Republicans have none to offer.

Fire and mine boss examinations in the Connellsville region are becoming more rigid as the positions represent more responsibility.

Uniontown is stretching out the old contention whether the larger the county the smaller the police force. If our recollection serves us right, the burgess of a borough hasn't control of anything but his tongue and he doesn't always control that.

The Greene county court gave young Thomas a long time in the Pen to think over his crime.

The official movie censor is now ensued in passing upon Pennsylvania pictures and her first act was to chop down the soul kiss to one yard of film. There is lots of room for other improvements.

This is the season when oil tanks ought to be insured.

When a strike leader, especially a woman, announces that no mediators need apply, it begins to look as if she preferred a little brief authority to any other interest.

The swimming hole seems to be coming along swimmingly.

Justice Mestrest of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court has enough judging to do in the regular course of business. He does not regular after any arbitrations or trials during the mid-summer vacation season.

The President has a psychological connection with the Senate.

President Wilson wants a square deal and the country wants a rest. The President is getting his, but the nation isn't.

All is not well with Frank Wells.

Paving applications are coming in with a rush. Council is really not used to spend that money all at once, and perhaps it will be when we do so.

The Board of Health reports the milk all right. To keep it right it should be tested again and again.

The Perryopolis Centennial promises to put that town on the map.

The transcontinental railroads have won a case against the government. It has been a long time since anything has come the way of the railroads. However, it is time something came their way.

Carrasco and Huerta have been invited to send representatives to the A. B. C. Mediation. Where does Villa come in?

The High School Experiment Stations will welcome the rain. The boys didn't bargain for the sprinkling can.

CHAPTER I.

Introducing a Pair of Scoundrels. (To which I will see the Coronation and, incidentally, discover that I am a much-advertised person.)

"But goodness gracious, Anne, you aren't going to England, are you? Wait till school closes in June, and we'll make up a party."

My room-mate, Mary Jenner, is sleek enough when she is alone with me, but company lends her a florid persuasiveness. Besides, all the rest of the girls curled up among our cushions agreed with her—I could see it in their faces.

"If his sacred majesty, King George the Fifth, will consent to put on his coronation until July, I shall be glad to wait for you," I answered, with some asperity. "But I don't think it's likely, do you?"

"Well, but Anne—" Mary was beginning, when Agnes Pomeroy broke in. Agnes is a plump girl with a vein of common sense amounting almost to genius.

"Look here," she said, "what's the best? You won't see a thing except the street processions. You might just as well stay in Winnipeg and read all about it in the illustrated London papers. Nobody can get into the Abbey without carrying a papa."

I put my nose in the air. "Well, even at that—" I suggested brazenly. The girls laughed, and Agnes shied a chocolate cream at me, missing me by about three feet.

"I don't believe even having red hair and being a mascot would accomplish a peer by coronation time, my dear," she said. "But by all means go ahead if you've set your heart on it. After school is out we'll join you."

"You let my red hair alone, Pomeroy See!" I retorted wrathfully. "I'm twenty-two years old, and I guess I know how to take care of myself. And if you've got determined temperament and want something badly and all your friends put stupid obstacles in your way—why, it's enough to make a plaster angel feel annoyed."

Agnes only laughed, and ate another chocolate, though she knows they make her fatter, and my decision was accepted as an established fact, which I thought was another proof of my determined temperament.

It seems strange to look back on that kimono party now. I felt so old and capable and assured that nothing could possibly happen to me. If I had dreamed of the mad adventures that were so soon to begin—ah, well, perhaps I would have gone forward just the same. It is hardly twelve months since we sat by that crackling fire, but I feel as if it had been a thousand years. After all, twenty-two is very young.

But, at any rate, I had a perfectly good reason for leaving school two months before the end of the term. The doctor, who is an old friend of mine—I used to pull his mustaches when I wore pinatas—told me I had been working too hard, and was on the verge of a complete breakdown if I didn't at once have complete rest and change of scene. So I asked him if the air of any particular place would benefit me especially, and he pulled a curl for me and said he felt sure English air was the one thing for my ailment.

"Are you going to visit your ancestral castle?" asked Mary as I was packing. "It doesn't really seem polite to go so near and never say 'bonjour'."

"Of course," I answered, though really I hadn't thought about it before. "I'm going to see the Chateau Cléchy, and also I'm going to try to recover my ancestral property. I've a bundle of bonds stacked up in a romantic old vault in Paris. Maybe I'll come back in halves, or something extra nice about this adventure."

I haven't mentioned anything about my castle in France, have I? One doesn't talk about one's family, of course, but really, mine was very interesting. My grandfather is the Comte d'Ives, and owns a large feudal property in Cléchy, which is in Normandy. My father was his son by his first marriage, and when father was hardly more than a boy, he quarreled with grandfather, who turned him out. Father came to Canada to make his fortune, drifted to the coast, and finally married an American girl in San Francisco. I was born there, my mother dying when I was only a baby, and my father when I was seventeen. After that I came to Winnipeg and taught for a living. Of course, things were hard sometimes, but father had a worse time than I, and for his sake I never could forgive grandfather for turning him out of doors.

"Some day, Anne," my father used to say laughingly, "you'll go back to France and be adopted and become heiress of Cléchy."

"I guess the rest of them won't leave much for me to be heiress of," I answered, usually, and the subject dropped. Save for a fluent knowledge of French I had nothing about me to betray the fact of my foreign extraction, and I never wished to meet any of my father's relatives—never! Sometimes my father would speak about the property in the strong box. It was all in bonds—worthless ones, too—which had been left my father by his few acquaintances on the boat, so that my name was never mentioned in his presence, and it was characteristic of his complacency that he did not discover it.

When, by chance, I obtained a few minutes' respite from his odious presence, as sure as fate I would see him upon the lower deck in lengthy and stealthy conference with the villainous Greek—for such I had discovered his nationality to be. There was a cross-eyed woman, apparently the servant's wife, whom I had observed with him, and after the first day, when Mr. Magniff would bring his servant up on our deck and keep him near while he engaged me in conversation, I began to notice that the woman would post herself below and watch my face with somber, never-winking eyes.

My curiosity became so great that I questioned Mr. Magniff about this strange pair of dependents. He burst into loud laughter.

"Poor Zeuxis is unhappily married," he chuckled when he could speak. "I took the fellow over to America with me, and his wife, who is insanely jealous of the scamp, followed on the next boat. Ever since that she has stuck to him closer than a leech. I fancy she imagines that he's trying to leave her."

"But why does she stare at me?" I demanded.

He hemmed and hawed a little.

"You're a good sport, Miss Howard," he confided at length. "I'll let you in. She's jealous of you. She thinks he's planning to elope with you. Ho, ho, ho!"

The cur collapsed into my chair and laughed. I started away indignantly, but he sprang to his feet and grasped me by the sleeve.

"Don't go," he begged. "Till stop the fellow's insolence if you say the word. But Zeuxis has been useful to me in many ways, and just now we are planning to pull off a little coup in England which is going in net us a few thousand. Our last one failed, unfortunately."

"What was it?" I asked, my curiosity stimulated.

He looked at me leisurely. I believe that, for some occult reason, the rascal considered that he had made a conquest of me. At any rate, he began blabbing his story quite proudly into my eager ears.

"It's a long tale," he said. "To tell it I've got to go back to my father, and he ain't a pleasant subject."

"O, please go on," I said, as eagerly as I could. Somehow the idea had entered my head that this rogue in some way was bound up with the success or failure of my enterprise. Try as I might, I could not rid myself of the thought.

"Yes, what was it?" I cried.

He sobered immediately. "Now you'd like to know, wouldn't you?" he drawled. "You tantalizing little devil!"

I rose with great dignity and walked away, leaving him calling "Miss Howard!" in desperate apology.

Thereafter, although my curiosity was burning, I avoided him sedulously, cutting him directly when we met and ignoring his advances at the dinner table. But he was so persistent that I was driven to all sorts of expedients to avoid him, and, when my need of a walk became urgent, I resorted to the long deck of the steamer, which was practically deserted, since few steerage passengers were returning to Europe at that season of the year.

I am usually quick to form my judgments of people. I did not like either of these fellow-passengers at all. In a very short time I had discovered that they were master and servant, or stood in some such relation. The one bore the hall-marks of wealth without refinement, the other was coarse and villainous-looking Greek or Armenian, as I judged. I was relieved when I saw him take himself to the steerage. But judge my disgust when I discovered that I had been seated next to him at the dinner table!

He did not lose any time striking up an acquaintance with me. "May I pass you the mustard, Miss Howard?" were his first words. He had evidently been looking me up and made a mistake in the name. I was about to disillusion him when his next words checked the words on my lips.

"Allow me to introduce myself, since we are to see so much of each other during our voyage," he continued, with an odious smirk. "My name is Magniff—Leopold Magniff—a name tolerably well known in Paris and elsewhere."

"The—banker?" I managed to gasp.

"The son of the banker," he corrected, much gratified at my ready recognition. "The old boy's my father. We now control the second largest combination of capital in France, and the fourth largest in Europe," he added complacently. "Not that I'll step into the old donkey's shoes, though. He hates me like poison. I grieve to say that my father has a mind purely commercial and utterly incapable of appreciating any of the refinements of life."

It isn't often that I wish I were a man, but that's what I did just then, so that I might have had the pleasure of kicking him. But I smothered my rage and struggled with my surprise. It seemed like the opening of some wonderful melodrama, my chance encounter, with this man while on my way to Europe, to take my securities out of his father's safety deposit box. I murmured something and fled up to the deck. Later, Mr. Magniff appeared and engaged me in conversation for about an hour, until I found some excuse to dismiss him and go to bed.

During the next few days he made himself my constant companion. He seemed to me his appearances at the table so that we should sit down together. When I passed the deck I was sure to encounter him, whereupon, altering the direction of his walk, he would step with me. At evening, no sooner had I drawn up my chair in a comfortable and secluded place than he would discover me and immediately seat himself at my side. I made feast on the ship's rail, "there's only three of them alive in the direct line today: the comte, a very old man now; a daughter by a second marriage, and her son, the comte's grandson, a young fellow of twenty-five. There was a son by an earlier marriage, but he went to America and died there. I traced him to California and lost him there. The burning of San Francisco had destroyed all the records. I advertised in all the Pacific coast papers without result. There had been a marriage, but I had observed with him, and after the first day, when Mr. Magniff would bring his servant up on our deck and keep him near while he engaged me in conversation, I began to notice that the woman would post herself below and watch my face with somber, never-winking eyes.

A MESSAGE TO THIN, WEAK, SCRAPPY FOLKS

An Easy Way to Gain 10 to 30 lbs. of Hold, Healthy, Permanent Flesh. Thin, nervous, underdeveloped men and women everywhere are heard to say, "I can't understand why I do not get fat, on plenty of good eating food." The reason is just this: You cannot eat fat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat-making elements of food. The body can not get them out through the bowels as waste.

What is needed is a means of gently urging the assimilative functions of the stomach and intestines to absorb the fat elements of food and to carry them to the blood, where they may reach the starved shrunken run-down tissues and build them up. The thin person's body is like a dry sponge.

Thousands of small boys, boys practicing an unwanted thirst for days past in order that they may express their patriotism by a prodigal expenditure of their money on Juicy Fruit.

The State Department of Health is also making its contributions by ordering a special supply of tetanus antitoxin in the effort to prevent cases of lockjaw among these same small boys.

There are not great many grownups, who having been permitted to run the risk of blowing themselves up in their youth and not having succeeded, believe that their sons and their neighbors should be given the same youthful privilege. The excess of youthful exuberance is reserved for those children who are unfortunate enough to lose their hands or their eyes or life itself in their "celebration."

Last year Pennsylvania had more accidents on the Fourth of July than any other state in the Union. Nine deaths and 483 accidents were reported for the day in this Commonwealth.

In the entire United States there were only 1,163 accidents and 32 deaths, so it is evident from the most casual observation that Pennsylvania had far more than her quota in this distressing and unnecessary statistics.

Let the municipal authorities do their duty in preventing the barbels sacrifice by prohibiting the sale and use of dangerous fireworks by providing a sufficient amount of pleasurable entertainment to make the day a real celebration for young and old.

Caution—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in overcomesing nervousness and generally improving the physique, it should not be taken unless you are willing to gain ten pounds or more, for it is a wonderful flesh-builder.—Adv.

Little Talks on Health and Hygiene
by Samuel G. Shultz, M.D., L.W. D. Commissioner of Health.

Thousands of small boys, boys practicing an unwanted thirst for days past in order that they may express their patriotism by a prodigal expenditure of their money on Juicy Fruit.

The State Department of Health is also making its contributions by ordering a special supply of tetanus antitoxin in the effort to prevent cases of lockjaw among these same small boys.

There are not great many grownups, who having been permitted to run the risk of blowing themselves up in their youth and not having succeeded, believe that their sons and their neighbors should be given the same youthful privilege. The excess of youthful exuberance is reserved for those children who are unfortunate enough to lose their hands or their eyes or life itself in their "celebration."

Last year Pennsylvania had more accidents on the Fourth of July than any other state in the Union. Nine deaths and 483 accidents were reported for the day in this Commonwealth.

In the entire United States there were only 1,163 accidents and 32 deaths, so it is evident from the most casual observation that Pennsylvania had far more than her quota in this distressing and unnecessary statistics.

Let the municipal authorities do their duty in preventing the barbels sacrifice by prohibiting the sale and use of dangerous fireworks by providing a sufficient amount of pleasurable entertainment to make the day a real celebration for young and old.

Caution—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in overcomesing nervousness and generally improving the physique, it should not be taken unless you are willing to gain ten pounds or more, for it is a wonderful flesh-builder.—Adv.

A HIGHER LEVEL OF STOREKEEPING

came in with this store ten years ago.

Wright-Metzler Company began business in the present location—then out of the beaten path—with the prediction that store-keeping, as we intended to do it, would "go up the spout in quick time."

A relationship with the public was against the common rules of having everything on the side of the storekeeper.

BEFORE WE CAME

A. People were not cordially welcomed into stores unless it was thought they would buy something, and

One had to almost sneak out to avoid the "barker" at the door, whose business it was to take the visitor back for a sharper salesperson to "handle."

B. An inflexible one-price did not exist. You rarely paid what a thing was marked—a confession on the storekeeper's part that it was over-priced. There is still living proofs of this fact.

C. Exchanges of goods were difficult and attended with much bickering, and a money-back request brought out adroit questioning that did everything to keep you and the money separated.

D. There were fewer holidays, and longer hours of service for the store workers.

shows the progress of ten years under the plan originally laid down for serving the public. We have grown in size and grown into the people's confidence. This store's seven year old offspring following the same line of reasoning, also grew both ways. Together, the two business oaks are reaching upward and outward—this Connellsburg store recently annexed new selling-places, and the Uniontown store at this moment is adding two new floors.

E. Store advertisements were distantly related to the goods; store windows contained baits you could not buy; store courtesy did not overstep into the helpfulness as of today. The delivery of goods was uncertain.
